Curability of Tumours by Medicines..

PRELIMINARY REMARKS ON THERAPEUTIC PRINCIPLES.

WHEN drugs affect certain parts of the economy specifically, the general fact is the one elaborated by the great and greatly vilified Paracelsus, and it constituted the backbone of his practice.

Remedies owning this quality were his Appropriata. That is, they are appropriated by the organs they respectively and specifically influence, much as we may suppose the kidneys seize upon the particles in the blood to form what is then known as urine.
Grounded on this basis, the medical

CHAPTER X.

John Hunter's Conception of a Cure the only TRUE ONE.

IN The Morton Lecture on Cancer and Cancerous Diseases for 1889, Sir Spencer Wells, Bart., F.R.C.S., quotes thus from John Hunter (p. 30):—

Let me read to you what our great master, John Hunter, said just a hundred years ago (Palmer's edition of his works, vol. i., page 625) as to cures for cancer:—

" No cure has yet been found; for what I call a cure is an alteration of the disposition and the effect of that disposition, and not the destruction of the cancerous parts. But as we have no such medicine, we are often obliged to remove cancerous parts, which extirpation, however, will often cure as well as we could do by changing the disposition and action. Arsenic seems to have some power of this kind,

CHAPTER XIX.

Tumour of the Right Breast.

IN unmarried lady of thirty-nine came under my observation, brought by her mother, on May 2nd, 1889. Spinal deformity all her life, and wearing instruments since she was twelve; the lateral curvature being very considerable. Her father died of phthisis; of her Geschwister two brothers and two sisters died of phthisis, and one brother died of typhoid.

I have often noticed a proneness to typhoid in those disposed to phthisis. Rheumatism, neuralgia, measles and whooping cough, comprise the list of her own previous ailments. Her tongue is pippy in its anterior half; in the outer upper aspect of her right

The Physician must be a General.

The Curing Art Warfare.

I THINK I must somewhere have read that the great Napoleon's definition of war—La Guerre—runs thus . . . C'est Part d'etre le plus fort sur un point donne; and such is I the art of curing disease.

THICKENING OF CARDIA.

Lady——, mother of nine children, came under my observation on March 26^h, 1886, for a tumour at the top of the stomach and much vomiting. She was at the time fifty-three years of age, and in a very sad state indeed—hopeless, so every one thought.
