Preface

The indefatigable labours of the late Dr. Ruddock have done more, perhaps, than those of any other writer in Europe or America in furthering the spread of homoeopathy as well in connection with the treatment of domesticated animals as in that of man; and there is little doubt that if the horse and the cow and the sheep and the dog, could only speak in the language of their masters, they would give expression in the warmest terms to their gratitude for all that he has done in their behalf.

This little volume has had no small share in carrying out the humane objects of its lamented author and the publishers confidently hope that this new and enlarged edition of it, which has been issued to meet the urgent demands of the public, will continue and extend the good work so long sustained by it's predecessors.
