The Heritage of Homoeopathic Literature

Foreword

When Julian Winston phoned me in March of this year and related his idea of a "book about books," I was very surprised to hear that the first draft had been finished— just two years after his marvelous Faces of Homoeopathy, the most interesting publication in the whole field of homoeopathy I have seen for many years.

On the following pages the reader can expect a broad overview concerning homoeopathic literature, written by an experienced pen. Naturally for an American author, books and periodicals in English are primarily referenced, but German titles of greater importance are also mentioned— such as the writings of Hahnemann, Bonninghausen, or Jahr.

Everybody dealing with homoeopathy as practitioner, scientist, or historian will find a lot of very useful information in these pages. Due to the chronological arrangement of entries the development of our literature is seen at first glance. The homoeopathic community is very much indebted to the author for his efforts in compiling this book. He has done the same as Claude Rozet did in 1984 for the French homoeopathic publications. When will Germany follow?
