AILMENT AND CONDITION

A. WEIGHT PROBLEMS AND EATING DISORDERS

1. Obesity

The definition of obesity is an excess of fat and the definition of overweight is an excess of body weight relative to the height. It is important to note that a muscular person may be overweight but have a low fat percentage, so body weight cannot be used alone as an accurate gauge for obesity. Obesity occurs when over a period of time net energy intake exceeds net energy output. Excess weight is often blamed on gland problems and occasionally this is the case, when the thyroid gland is not secreting sufficient hormones and weight also increases due to consumption of more sweets and excessive alcohol. Thus over-eating and lack of exercise are the most frequent causes.

Obesity is a considerable risk which invites huge groups of diseases in life. The risk is significantly greater if obesity is associated with smoking. In terms of serious conditions associated with obesity, it significantly increases the risk of a heart attack, heart failure, high blood pressure, etc. On the other hand, there is an increased risk of diseases associated with low fibre in the diet like diabetes that develops in older persons. There is also new evidence that infants who are notably under weight at one year of age have a significant risk of developing diabetes later. Fat tissue is a large reservoir of cholesterol and obese people have a higher concentration of cholesterol in the bowel with a tendency to precipitation of gallstones. Generally, in case of fatty women, there is also complication in pregnancy and a reduction in fertility. Another chance is that fat people die sooner. And of course, it is dangerous to be so fat that one cannot get out of the bed.

If you are over weight, you should take sensible measures to be healthy including regular exercise and control of appetite. The amount and the type of food eaten should be associated with less fat and sugar.

The homoeopathic treatment for obesity is constitutional, which may be adopted. In the meantime, specific remedies according to the relation of symptoms may be tried for early relief.

MENTAL DISEASES

1. Epilepsy

Epilepsy is also called 'fits' by the local population. It is mostly due to an imbalance of wind, mucus and energy. The onset is frequently sudden with the patient first emitting a loud cry that is followed by a loss of consciousness. Generalized convulsions, lockjaw, cyanosis, foaming at the mouth (sometimes blood comes out of the mouth if the tongue or lips have been bitten), bloodshot eyes, for a few minutes the patient enters into a stuporous sleep. In some cases, the victim sleeps for at least half an hour before he slowly regains consciousness. Upon awakening, the patient has a headache and experiences mental fatigue, generalized pain and discomfort, and does not remember anything about the epileptic episode. The severity of the epileptic attacks is such that the patient only takes on a fixed stare and stands or sits as if in a trance, and drops anything held in his hands at that time without knowing and becomes quite pale. Such an episode is called a small epileptic attack. In some cases, this phenomenon is a daily recurrence, or one that takes place every few days, or every few months. In some cases attacks occur several times during a day.

Argentum nitricum

- => The aura preceding the attacks starts from the genital organs and the patient may be seized with violent convulsions during coitus.
- => Suitable if the aura starts from the solar plexus.
- => The patient becomes very irritable, short tempered and often talks irrationally especially in the sexual form that is brought on by masturbation.
